

tween New York, Philadelphia, and Boston. The event will be held this month on the links of the Brookline Country Club, and it will be the fourth annual competition for the Clement A. Griscom Cup. Last year Boston, which had just been admitted to the team contest, won the trophy, but on the two previous occasions the metropolitan women held the cup. Miss Frances A. Griscom will surely play for the Philadelphia team, and Miss Adair is likely to accompany her to Boston.

It was expected that the Baltusrol Golf Club at Short Hills, N. J., would give a women's competition this fall, as has been its custom in the past, but the officers of the club have decided against it, and propose to give a big women's tournament next year. In fact, the Merion Club tournament in honor of Miss Adair has virtually taken the place in the East this season formerly occupied by the Baltusrol tournament, and another event for women, coming so soon after the recent contest, it was feared would draw but a limited number of entries. The Baltusrol Club, however, will begin this week an important contest of its own for women, being its women's club championship. Among the contestants will be Mrs. E. A. Manice, the metropolitan champion; Mrs. Pendleton Rogers, Mrs. W. Fellowes Morgan, and probably Miss Maude Wetmore. The recent Philadelphia tournament has given excellent practice for the home players, as the annual championship tournament of the Women's Philadelphia Golf Association will begin this week on the course of the Huntington Valley Country Club.

In local circles the coming week will be a lively one, for there will be two important tournaments, the postponed Fox Hills tournament on Friday and Saturday, and the annual Tuxedo tournament beginning Thursday and continuing through the balance of the week. The Tuxedo course is a popular one with metropolitan golfers, and the tournaments there usually have a good entry list of strong players. The qualifying round on the first day will be 36 holes, and a gold medal is offered for the lowest score. William P. Hamilton gives the chief trophy, the President's Cup, for the first sixteen, and the Governors' Cup will be played for by the second sixteen. A third cup has been presented by William Kent for all who fail to qualify in the first two sets of sixteen, and the handicap cup has been given by E. H. Harriman.

MISS ADAIR'S CHAIN OF VICTORIES

Great Britain's Woman Golf Champion Defeats Mrs. Stout, America's ex-Champion, for the Griscom Cup—Home Players Win International Team Match.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—England won the woman's golf match here to-day, but America was victorious in the team match. The former event was the final struggle in the Griscom invitation tournament, and Miss Rhona Adair met Mrs. Charles T. Stout, twice the American National champion. Miss Adair played a much better game than Mrs. Stout, and deserved her victory, which was by 2 up in the eighteen-hole match. The feature of the game was the wonderful accuracy of the young victor. The driving of the two was about equal, Miss Adair's brassie shots were better than Mrs. Stout's, while the latter's approaches were truer than those of her opponent. Both made mistakes in putting, on several occasions short puts of a couple of feet being missed.

Miss Adair throughout played a more venturesome game, and whenever possible would use a brassie to carry a bunker, while her opponent would use a mid-iron and play short. Mrs. Stout did not suffer from this, as her approaches were so accurate. The cards for the match follow:

Miss Adair.....	6	4	6	4	5	3	6	5-45
Mrs. Stout.....	5	6	5	7	4	5	3	6-45
Mrs. Adair.....	6	5	6	5	5	6	4	40-91
Mrs. Stout.....	7	5	5	6	6	3	6	50-35

This contest counted toward the team match, as did the Phipps-Thomson match, which was the final for the second cup contest, Miss Phipps winning by 3 up and 2 to play. The team match was between nine Americans on one side and three English and six Canadian golfers on the other side. Only three of the visitors were successful, Miss Green of Montreal and Miss Phepoe of Toronto, besides Miss Adair. The scores follow:

AMERICA.	BRITAIN.
Mrs. C. T. Stout.....	0
Miss M. Curtis.....	1
Miss G. Bishop.....	0
Miss F. Osgood.....	1
Miss A. Phipps.....	1
Mrs. C. F. Fox.....	1

The summaries of the final rounds for the three cups follow:
First Cup.—Final Round—Miss Rhona Adair, Portrush, Ireland, beat Mrs. C. T. Stout, Apawamis, 2 up.
Second Cup.—Final Round—Miss A. Phipps, Brookline, beat Miss M. G. Thompson, St. Johns, N. B., 3 up and 2 to go.
Third Cup.—Final Round—Miss L. Biddle, River-ton, N. J., beat Miss Dallett, St. Davids, 2 up and 1 to go.

EFFECT OF MISS ADAIR'S VISIT.

The presence of Miss Rhona Adair, England and Ireland's woman golf champion, in America at this time, has had a stimulating effect upon women's golf activity in the East, and, although she may take part in no other big tournament during the remainder of her stay, invitations have been extended to Miss Adair to visit a number of courses before she departs for home. Her presence in the big Philadelphia competition, in which the leading women of the country except those of the West were entered, is in itself a prominent feature of the year's golf performances. In this Miss Adair has given the women in golf what the men have recently enjoyed in the visit of the Oxford and Cambridge golfing team.

Never before, with the exception of the professional visits of Vardon and Taylor, has America been so favored with visiting golfers who have won high rank in the game. It is the first time that some of the best amateurs from the other side have been able to show our native players the best points of their game, and helpful lessons have been learned by both men and women students, who have been keen observers of the foreigners' methods of play. The Englishmen, and Miss Adair also, exhibit a certain careless ease in their game that has surprised many of the hard-working players here. The fact has often been mentioned that the American golfer works too hard over his game. That is, he gives a greater appearance of seriousness and intense desire to win than is apparent in the play of the foreigners. This does not mean to say that the foreigners do not try to win, for they do, thoroughly, but there is a greater ease in their play, to the superficial observer, giving the idea that they are playing merely for the fun of the thing, with no special desire to win.

LESSONS FROM FOREIGN GOLFERS.

A metropolitan golfer who saw the English team play in most of its matches, in commenting upon this playing difference, said:

"It was a delight to watch the Oxford and Cambridge men play. Their style never varied, whether in mere practice or in a stiff team match. As the English golfer prepared to make his stroke there was no indication that he was trying to do an important piece of work. He walked carelessly up to the spot where the ball was lying, and, gauging his distance, quickly hit the ball without any more ado than a person might make in hitting a stone or a green apple. But it was not a careless effort, for the evidences of careful and long training were behind the stroke. Invariably the ball went true to the mark, and what looked like careless ease finally resolved itself into the perfection of real golf. The Englishmen showed that golf was their recreation and even in a match they did not let the nervous tension, at least to outside appearances, get the better of them in their play. With most of the Americans it was different; there was a hard, serious earnestness apparent in their game, particularly when they were being hard pushed, and it was easy to see that they were working hard to win."

Miss Adair, last week at Philadelphia, exhibited practically the same characteristics. Carelessness undoubtedly cost her several holes, but the wonder of it was that even with some miserable plays she invariably finished so far on top as to surprise the old-time critics. When Miss Adair made the lowest qualifying score in the first day of the Merion Club tournament—91 strokes—she lost fully six strokes by incurably bad play, taking nine for one hole. Miss Adair's great strength was in the latter half of the match, when, notwithstanding how badly off she might have been for the first nine holes, her ability to play a winning uphill game carried her to victory.

Miss Adair may visit Boston to witness the intercity women's team competition be-
